
Application Expired 8500 Tecdoc

A: Open the main folder from your TecDoc DVD (if applicable) and open Installer - it will download the relevant patches, perhaps complete with any missing.dll files. If the exe file itself has the "Application expired" error, you will need to apply the appropriate patches. One way to do this is to run the exe, it will open the 'Installer' program automatically and you can select the patches you need to apply. A: IF you got TecDoc from the CD and the CD contains the installer, launch the installer to manually patch and/or repair TecDoc from the CD (or at least the BUG(s) indicated in this document. A: I had this problem as well. It may have something to do with the zip file having a corrupt header. Download TecDoc 01/2012 again and extract the file. Replace the "1 2 3 4 5 6" zip file with the correct zip file. i.e. filename should be "0122-1" and "0122-2" (and so on). Q: How to access columns of csv file present at a particular location on hard drive? I need to access a particular location of a csv file which is present on the hard drive. This file does not reside in a file system but is in a user folder. Is there any way to access it? I am using windows 7. A: You can use VBScript. Run VBScript: "C:\Program Files\ActiveState Komodo IDE 8 Beta 2\win32\komodo.vbs" "C:\Users\testuser\Desktop\target.csv" This VBScript will print out contents of the target.csv file as a text, with headers, in a console window. Set notepad = CreateObject("WScript.Shell") notepad.Run "C:\Program Files\ActiveState Komodo IDE 8 Beta 2\win32\komodo.vbs" „,0 This tells Komodo to run the script. The Command Line arguments are: &"C:\Program Files\ActiveState Komodo IDE 8 Beta 2\win32\komodo.vbs" &(optional) Use the argument 0 to just run the VBScript without opening a console. &(optional) Use the
