To back up S3E, you need to use the NCSH's ZBackup tool. It's a command line application that you can install and run using an installer, or you can just copy the zbin executable to your PATH and run it from the command line. Notes about the backup: - You should use the ZBackup that came with the NCSH Backup and Recovery Toolsuite. I haven't created my own version of this zbin. - You must use the ZBackup from the NCSH Backup and Recovery Toolsuite to back up the S3E binary. You cannot install another version of this zbin. - There may be compatibility issues when copying the S3E binary. I have not tried anything besides a right-click. - I recommend using a thick client with a local backup.
