Non-pharmaceutical effects of three cranberry-based products on prevention of urinary tract infections. The effects of Cranberry Bloc® on prevention of urinary tract infections (UTI) and urinary symptoms were studied in three randomized, double-blind, crossover studies of healthy female volunteers. Subjects received test products (Santaris® a non-alcoholic cranberry beverage, Cranberry Plus® a cranberry juice that has been reconstituted with sugar and water to form a beverage, and Cranberry Drink® a cranberry juice that is commercially available) twice daily for 7 days, at a dose of 8 oz each for a total of 16 oz of product per day. Compared with the placebo, the cranberry juice containing products reduced UTI occurrence by at least 77%, 66% and 59%, respectively. Bloc® was also shown to be effective in reducing the severity of UTI symptoms. Further studies are needed to determine the best dose and beverage form of cranberry juice or cranberry juices for prevention of UTI.

#DefendCharter buses? Though it has been almost a year since the school board voted to end our school district's contract with the Greater Boston Transit District, the opponents of change are still circling
