Building a new file from scratch If you're the kind of person who likes to start projects from scratch and work on your images individually, you can always create a new document in Photoshop. In addition to being a quick way to create a new file, it enables you to work on a variety of versions of an image and compare different elements of the image. Follow these steps to create a new document: 1. Choose File⇒New from the main menu, as shown in Figure 2-1. 2. Navigate to where you want to save the file. If you choose the right option from the New dialog box, you may also be able to save the file automatically. Select the option File type: Photoshop document, and then click OK to create the file. You can also choose another option from the Save panel, as shown in the figure, to save the file in a format that's often more convenient. This includes JPEG, TIFF, or GIF. You can always save the file as a Photoshop file in a different folder and open it in Photoshop. 3. Change the size of the document if you need to. You can change the size in the New dialog box. The options provided vary depending on what software you're using. For example, Photoshop has several preset document sizes. The next section on saving saves an image at 12.0 inches wide by 8.0 inches high. 4. Change the resolution of the file if you need to. You can change this in the New dialog box. Some folks work in standard resolution, that is, pixel dimensions of 300 dpi. If you work on a specific need, you can change the resolution of the new file. For example, if the design of the finished product requires a 72 dpi resolution, you can set the resolution of the new file to 72 dpi. 5. Check the options for saving the file to be sure that you want to save the file

Neely was one of at least 20 people, including two police officers, who attended the party at the home of Adenhart, killed in a car crash in 2010. The occupants of Adenhart's home testified that they had planned to stage a party in the garage and engage in sexual activities in the house while Adenhart watched. Q: hasClass, with a line through I have a navigation bar that I want to hide when the user scrolls down, or so to speak. I have no problem removing classes using a single function, but I really need some help understanding the concept of.hasClass() and.addClass() What I am trying to do is have a line through the menu when I reach the bottom of the page. What I have so far is: JS: $(function() { $('.menu').addClass('bounce'); $(window).scroll(function(){ if($(window).scrollTop() > $('#menu').height()) { $('.menu').removeClass('bounce'); } }); }); CSS: #menu { position: fixed; top: 0px; left: -50px; width: 100%; height: 50px; line-height: 50px; } .menu { background-color: #ccc; padding: 0px; margin: 0px; width: 100%; height: 50px; position: fixed; top: 0px; text-align: center; padding-top: 7px; } I know this code is redundant, but I want to know the proper way. A: I've never used bounce but from your question you could try this: $(function() { var topOfMenu = $('.menu').offset().top; $(window).scroll(function(){ if($(window).scrollTop() > topOfMenu) { $('.menu').addClass('line'); } }); }); That basically adds a class of line to the menu to indicate
