A: Substrings enclosed in double quotes, optionally delimited by slashes, contain one or more characters. If there's only one character in the substring, it is matched literally, so it doesn't have to be escape quoted. Otherwise, one or more of the characters between quotes must be escaped. The characters between double quotes don't need escaping. It's more straightforward to use q// for this, and it's easier to understand: my $foo = "1/2/3"; my $foo_arr = q/2/3; my $foo = q/1/2

What's new in Amanda's Sticker Book:

Wednesday, February 29, 2012 If you are like me I just love the idea of now being able to watch movies from the 1960s and 1970s on our baby tv. For those of you who are in the market for children's movies for your little one, I think the VHS price is certainly tempting. It is certainly an inexpensive way to add great value entertainment to the lives of the young 'uns. Here is a list of children's movies, sorted in the order that I'd like to watch them back-to-back to entertain the kiddies. Some of the titles may not be available at the moment, but will be soon after we move-in (just as soon as the new equipment is installed). I don't know what else to add, but if you are a fan of these movies I hope you find some fun titles that are worth watching - and tell your friends about it. I'd love to know what you'd suggest. I'd love to have you as a friend on Facebook, too! Disclaimer: We are NO longer able to buy new movies. Please check the Starflix video on line to view the movies (DVD quality only at this time).You can learn more about the site on my blog post on The Starflix Video Hook-up Saturday, February 25, 2012 We arrived in the area just a few days ago and we've been getting settled in. We are still unpacking the truck, getting things where they should be and setting up the camper tent, but we've been enjoying the great outdoors and seeing more of my husband's job. I grew up in the country when we lived in the US, and the area where we live has reminded me of the life I grew up with. There are people with calves, and cows, horses, donkeys, chickens and sheep or goats. We see horses being ridden, walking and being ridden in and as far as the eye can see is beautiful. The evenings at home so far have been incredible, trying to capture some memories with snap shots is going to be a challenge. It's funny to think about but the first thing I miss is video cameras, it's kind of like what made Tammy Meade back in '81 so special. I am just starting to capture the memories though, it's a challenge I am sure. It is a different world to come from southern Ontario and bring it
