Table of contents:

Tokeita, the land of the Fire-belching Dragon race. It is a continent of mountains and volcanoes and is the home of the humans and as such the land the transformed Autobots have been assigned to protect. But Tokeita is also inhabited by the floating Stone Shin're beings who are ruled over by a human named Poka.

Illya, the land of the Ice Monster race. It is a continent of hills and peaks, and is inhabited by the Atlanteans, who tried to match the Dinobots on equal footing using the power of the Dinocone Howl

Minerva, the land of the Dragon race. It is a continent of hills, rain forests, but also frozen deserts and grassy meadows. The vast mountain range of Minerva, the Tundra, is a forbidden territory, where a human called Whisp lives. Next to Whisp, in the valley of the Sea Dragon race, the power of the Lokascribe Eyecatcher clings to the remains of the Ancient Empire.

Interview with Kevin Barrett on Fe-RD-Grams

In April 2017, Voice actors who worked on AAA video games like Call of Duty and Star Wars: Battlefront 2 released a letter on LinkedIn detailing their community's dissatisfaction with the way that Activision and EA had handled their relationships with Twitter prior to February 2017, when Kevin Barrett released the first episode. That letter, in turn, triggered a wave of public rage on Twitter, many of which targeted the AAA gaming community's Big Four publishers, specifically Kotaku and Polygon.

Then, a second wave of rage hit, this time in response to Kevin Barrett's cartoon creation business, which promised to give people a "cartooning experience like you've never had." That was revealed to be quite a bit more than that, what with a variety of projects and targets under the Pizza Box Tron name, "DotCom" and "DotBill." In late March, he released a trailer for the first episode. After a few weeks of crowdfunding, the first episode was posted to YouTube on April 7.

Today, we're holding an exclusive interview with Kevin Barrett, creator of the ARCTURBOT project (which is still ongoing),
