Sgmt. . . Borzage Borzage ( ) is a coastal village located in the Dalmatia region of Croatia, in the municipality of Mala Kapela. Population History From the period of Byzantine rule in the 9th century, the region of Borzage was gradually conquered by the Byzantines and the principality of the Byzantine Empire, which lasted until the 14th century. In the 14th century, Kingdom of Bosnia was conquered by Ottoman Empire. In the Ottoman period, the Borzage was part of the Piva Reka Sanjak. The Franciscan State Priory of Zvornik was established in the village in 1336, but it was closed in 1539, so it was never built. According to Italian historian Francesco Fulcheri, in 1345 Borzage was part of the Kingdom of Bosnia. In 1765 the area was united with the Dalmatia region and the Borzage was formed part of the Komna (Comana) sanjak. During the Croatian War of Independence, in 1991, Borzage was part of Bosnia-Herzegovina. In 1992, it was conquered by Croatia. During the late 1980s and early 1990s, Borzage was a center of the political resistance movement against the Yugoslav communist regime, being part of the opposition Zagreb Commune. During the Yugoslav wars, Borzage was a center of Croatian militia, with the commander and leader of the Borzage militia being Hrvoje Šarinić. The peninsula of Borzage is composed of several villages: Asa, Borzage, Lubovac, Petrinja, Zavrсна, Debeli Brijeg and Borovin. Sport There is a football club, HNK Borzage, known for the playability of its stadium.
