Kenya police focus on crackdown on ivory, rhino horn JOHANNESBURG—Kenya's Wildlife Service and police are working to stop poaching and smuggling activities in the country, following the deaths of three rhinos in the past two months and a spate of elephant killings and elephant poaching in the past two years. The discoveries of three dead rhinos last month in Nairobi National Park, near the capital Nairobi, and West Pokot District in the east, have drawn attention to what wildlife officials say are significant increases in the number of poaching attacks in the Kenyan conservation sector. "Poaching has really increased. We're having more poaching this year than last year. It's pretty sad," said Martin Njeuhmeli, head of the Nairobi National Park Wildlife Service. "A lot of poaching is linked with the demand for ivory. We're talking about an eight-fold increase in elephants killed in the last two years compared to the previous eight years," he added. The Nairobi rhino killings have brought the attention of wildlife officials and law enforcement agencies to the poaching activities in the country. Kenya has also seen a sharp rise in elephant poaching in the past two years, with thousands of ivory tusks seized. Poaching activity in recent years has focused on Kenya d41b202975

What's new:

As a media creator, I need a uniform system for exporting songs, which is suitable for me to use easily and quickly. Previously, I did not use my own code. I exported my songs as avi, ogg, etc. And then I converted each of these using AVI Editor. How can I make this process quicker and simpler? A: I would try to use the sound editor included with pro tools, part of the daw chain. The sound editor is a comprehensive set of tools to control all aspects of sound recording, mixing and production. Using preset configurations for different exporting formats (with fine tuning) there shouldn't be much cluttering of the UI. Specifically I'd suggest you give the IB'mix' command in the Panner tab a try. It can be a bit tricky to get used to but you'll find it really user friendly once you've mastered it. A: You can also use FCP for the export, and have custom presets. Q: JavaScript - capturing those lines which contain words rather than keystrokes Problem statement I have a problem where I have a couple of days of data in which I search for specified letters. Specifically search for the letter "A" in "Friday" and "Yes" and then take note of the instances where an A is in those words, and note the dates too. I have tested this multiple times on a whole range of these letters and the only way it seems I can achieve this is manually copy/pasting each line and search/filter through to check if the line contains that word and if the line was between two dates Is there any way this can be done automatically with line numbers, so these lines take note of lines which contain the word A. I have around 3,000 lines of dates, words etc.. and trying to be as efficient as possible Current code // Turn window into a json object that I can easily var data = JSON.parse(window.localStorage.getItem('stocks')); // Get a list of words we would like to check var words = [];
