[Expression and its clinical significance of phosphatase and tensin homolog deleted on chromosome ten (PTEN) in gastric cancer]. To study the expression of PTEN in gastric cancer, and its clinical significance. PTEN expression was detected by using immunohistochemistry SP method in gastric cancer and corresponding adjacent normal tissue of gastric cancer patients. PTEN expression was found in 28 of the 50 gastric cancer cases (56%) and the rate was significantly lower than that in adjacent normal tissue (p 0.05). Loss of PTEN expression in gastric cancer may be associated with the degree of malignancy and aggressive phenotypes of gastric cancer.

The new development will be more than a million square feet and at least a quarter of the entire campus space will be devoted to the 'think tank,' said the university.

TORONTO — Researchers at the University of Toronto say they have discovered how to create molecules by looking at the DNA in cells and then reproducing it. The discovery is being called a major milestone in the field of synthetic biology. It was announced on Wednesday at a symposium in California on the future of this field. The new development will be more than a million square feet and at least a quarter of the entire campus space will be devoted to the 'think tank,' said the university. The development is based on a method developed at the GSU that makes it possible to recombine strands of DNA to make and destroy entire proteins. University vice-president of research and innovation Francesco Palteri says this is the beginning of a new model of doing science
