Advantages It improves a web developer's ability to design, prototype, and deploy applications rapidly and easily. It enables him or her to create dynamic web pages, easily develop and debug web applications, and create reusable components, all by using the Java programming language. A Java-based web application, can be used to create web applications without using Flash, Java applets or other programs, if desired. It can be hosted on a web server, and accessed using web browsers. A Java-based web application is a database application for the Internet, as opposed to other web applications which are only "front-end" applications (users can access the application through a web browser but the back-end application is run on a web server). Java-based web applications provide a potential base for developing and delivering data-driven web applications using HTML, CSS, and JavaScript, but are 6d1f23a050
