Q: Is there a way to bring non-system applications into launchpad? In the new version of Ubuntu 12.10, there are two new additions that I would like to be able to use. 1) The ability to control power management for a laptop, and 2) a way to bring up all of the apps that I want to use when I boot without logging into an Ubuntu session. I would like to be able to do this in either Ubuntu or Unity (or even KDE or XFCE). I would prefer to be able to do it within Ubuntu. A: I think that what you are looking for is the Activities overview, which appears if you are in the Unity desktop. On the top right corner of the screen (or if your mouse is pointing to the top right corner, the Keyboard indicator will appear with a small ball within it. If you click there you get a menu that looks like this: From there you can set what applications will be opened by default when you are in a certain state. For example, I only want to have 1 application loaded at all times when my computer is on, in order for it to be the active application, that's why I have set the default application in the example to be just a terminal emulator. Also note the middle tab: If you click on that tab you will see a list of applications that are already running, and if you click on those you will see the window they are running in. It is also possible to share applications between Activities, if you want to do so. You Can Make It Here You Can Make It Here is a 1971 American drama film directed by Jon Hassler and starring Yvonne De Carlo. Plot Living in a trailer park, Nancy Briggs and her boyfriend Larry, who is a pimp, desperately need money for an operation on Larry's badly broken leg. Nancy's boyfriend and accomplice to Larry, Cash, makes several attempts to rob the landlord, but fails each time, as the landlord gets tipped off by the two pimp/thieves. Larry is away working, so Nancy and Cash kidnap Martha, the landlord's wife. She's returned to the landlord as a sex slave. The accomplices are caught by the police, who arrest them. Cast Yvonne De Carlo as Nancy Briggs Barry Sullivan as Larry Jackie Kilgore as Martha Pamela Duncan 6d1f23a050
